About the Book

Famed as much for their love of the drink as they are for their prosperous or tumultuous reigns, Britain's Monarchs have always indulged in their favourite choices of ales, liquors and spirits. Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II is no exception. Written by Thomas Mace-Archer-Mills, the Chairman of the British Monarchist Society and Foundation, this meticulously researched and beautifully crafted book is a real celebration of the Monarchy. Filled with fascinating facts and timelines, it is lavishly illustrated with photographs taken from a private collection that have never been seen before.

The book will appeal to anyone who is proud to be British as well as the countless visitors from around the world who are fascinated with our unique traditions. To all who would like to raise a loyal glass and to toast Her Majesty, the book provides cocktail recipes with right Royal connections and traditions. It also contains a rich selection of non-alcoholic drinks to salute each of Her Majesty's realms around the world.

No cocktail book would be complete without a fine pairing of canapes from one of Her Majesty's finest chefs. Executive Chef in Defence Catering Rob Kennedy is based at the world famous Royal Military Academy Sandhurst. His exciting career as a top chef has seen him develop and serve up "Great British Menu" for celebrities and Royal international dignitaries. He has cooked for Her Majesty The Queen five times at prestigious events including the Sovereign's Parade for the Princes William and Harry and the 2012 Jubilee celebration at Windsor Castle. His recipes are there for you to create your own Royal celebrations.

Thomas is a radio presenter for London's Wizard Radio, which is broadcast internationally to over 15 countries, where he has had several different shows and themes over the past many

Thomas is a "Freeman of the City of London", Member of the Royal Society of St. George and a Chevalier in and of the Order of St. Stanislas – Grand Priory of Great Britain.

Over the past decade Thomas has worked (and still works) tirelessly on behalf of Crown and Country, creating the British Monarchist Society and eventually the British Monarchist Foundation, which has become the leading organisation for not only British, but international Monarchists which he funded himself. He has worked hard to incorporate like-minded people to partake in this much revered society within the United Kingdom, in which cumulatively under Thomas' direction, they bring British traditions to the next level. Within the last 3 years, Thomas has been busy constructing and readying his UK team, in order for the Society to organise and carry out an international celebration for Her Majesty, Queen Elizabeth II, when her reign exceeds that of Queen Victoria's in September of 2015. This is an exciting and challenging time for Thomas and his team, and it is with great commitment, energy and foresight that he is looking forward to producing a celebration that will leave a lasting legacy for the future generations of Britain.

In his desire to create and advance the legacy of the British Monarchist Society, he has been busy organising the implementation of the British Monarchist Foundation. The British Monarchist Foundation has been conceived and launched to help meet the needs of growing British and international charities which matter to the people of not only the United Kingdom, but the world. Many charities are championed by Her Majesty and the Royal family, to which duty, commitment and a lasting legacy for future generations is what the British Monarchist Foundation strives to build on with our support of those in need. The funds raised will be distributed to organisations as well as the less fortunate in the world to make a real change in their lives. In his spare time (which is very limited), Thomas enjoys travelling, horseback riding, the arts, theatre, music, fine dining, reading and writing.
